Pennsylvania, the pope, and the death penalty, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "During the course of the last few days, she's said I'm elitist, out of touch, condescending." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "What we have to do as Democrats is make sure we get enough votes to win in November." The fur is flying. Sen. Obama said, "You just got to kind of let it - you know." The Pennsylvania primary is days away and the stakes are crystal clear. What does each candidate have to do? And will Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) benefit from Democratic infighting? He said, "They're going to raise your taxes by thousands of dollars a year and they have the audacity to hope you don't mind." A man who knows a thing or two about hope did make it to the White House this week - Pope Benedict XVI. He said to the crowd, "God bless America." He's praying for U.S. Catholics, plus the Supreme Court weighs in on a critical death penalty case. Covering these stories, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, David Shribman of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Michael Duffy of Time magazine, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Service: PBS
Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:00:00

In the animal world females often call the shots. But their decisions may be surprising. In an effort to understand the mating game, NATURE follows biologist Chadden Hunter, PhD, through the Simien Mountains of northern Ethiopia, as he observes a troop of geladas, close cousins of baboons. He found that in gelada society females make all the decisions about mating, even though males are twice their size. The males are evaluated on everything from body heat to baby sitting skills. And once selected, no male gelada can ever rest on his laurels. Another male is always auditioning for his job. You'll also see female barn swallows that choose a male by the color of his chest and encounter a robotic sage grouse that is helping researchers learn about this species' elaborate courtship displays.

Airdate: 4/23/2008 8:00:00 AM/502
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:00:00

A series of strange, seemingly unrelated events is unfolding across the globe. In the West African nation of Ghana, olive baboons are ransacking crops and terrorizing villagers. Further down the coast in Namibia, a once-rich fishing ground is struggling to recover while putrid fumes are exploding from the ocean depths, spewing greenhouse gases into the air. Half a world away in Puerto Rico, space-age aqua pods filled with fish are floating far out at sea while off the coast of New Brunswick, Canada, migratory salmon are settling into coastal life astride kelp and mussels in a radical new farming experiment. All these events are linked to one activity -- over-fishing. Recent reports state that 90 percent of our most important commercial fish are gone and fisheries all over the world are in dire straits. It's become increasingly clear that our massive demands on the ocean are affecting life far beyond the shoreline, including Earth's own life support systems. Can we reduce fishing pressures, restore fish stocks and protect ocean habitats in time to safeguard the health of life in the sea and on land and ultimately our own?

There's nothing new in Scott McClellan's book about the propaganda campaign or the role of the press in selling the war, so why is it such big news? Journalists Jonathan Landay and John Walcott of McClatchy newspapers and Greg Mitchell of EDITOR & PUBLISHER examine the performance of the press in the lead up to the war, the reaction of the administration and the media to McClellan's book, and how the press is handling other important stories today. Also, as the contest between Barack Obama and Hillary Clinton for the Democratic nomination comes to an end, Bill Moyers sits down with Kathleen Hall Jamieson and Ron Walters to discuss how race and gender have played out in the presidential campaigns. A media analyst and recurring JOURNAL guest, Kathleen Hall Jamieson is director of the Annenberg Public Policy Center at the University of Pennsylvania. Ron Walters is director of the African American Leadership Center at the University of Maryland.

In the 1970s, female East German athletes came out of nowhere to dominate international sport. But behind their success lay a secret, state-sponsored doping program that distributed untested steroids and male hormones to athletes as young as 12. Many of these girls had no knowledge that they were being doped, and now, as grown women (and men), their broken bodies and damaged psyches bear witness to the cruelty of a government that pursued international glory and gold at the expense of its most acclaimed citizens. "Doping for Gold" digs deep into the secretive Cold War world of East German athletes, examining what drugs were used, how they were distributed and what damage they did to many of the athletes who were forced to take them. The result creates a timely perspective on today's many doping scandals and reveals the truth behind the biggest and most horrifying state-sponsored doping program the world has ever known.

The war in Iraq, rhetoric and reality, plus new help for homeowners, and the week in presidential politics, this week on "Washington Week." The administration says the news in Iraq is good. Gen. David Petraeus said, "There has been significant but uneven security progress in Iraq." But not good enough to pull out anytime soon. The generals want to freeze troop levels. Pres. George Bush said, "General Petraeus says he'll need time to consolidate his forces and assess how this reduced American presence will affect conditions on the ground. And I've told him he'll have all the time he needs." The response on Capitol Hill, not so good. Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "He is just dragging this out so he can put it at the doorstep of the new president of the United States." But Congress has at least one other immediate concern: how to signal to strapped American taxpayers that they're serious about fixing the economy. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "If we could put up as much as $30 billion of your money on this kind of a deal, can't we get the same kind of commitment when it comes to 8,000 people every day losing their homes?" Meanwhile out on the campaign trail, Hillary Clinton's rough week from Mark Penn to Bill Clinton. We explain why. Papal Visit Prompts Reflection on U.S. Catholic Identity: Pope Benedict XVI arrived in the U.S. Tuesday for his first official visit -- a trip aimed partly at rallying Catholics still struggling with the aftermath of a clergy sex abuse scandal. Experts on religion examine U.S. Catholicism and how Americans view the pope.

Series Title: Carrier
Episode Title: True Believers
Version: SD-Base
Length: 60
Airdate: 4/30/2008 9:00:00 PM/503
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:00:00

This episode explores the many expressions of faith onboard the USS Nimitz: faith in self, faith in one's shipmates, faith in the mission of the ship and the President's call to arms. The major religious groups on board are Catholic and Protestant, but there also is a coven of Wiccans, as well as a Pentecostal group whose newest member is challenged by the duality of his beliefs and the temptations of liberty as the ship drops anchor in Perth, Australia.

Alabama Stories

April 11, 2008                      7:00 PM                      Rosenwald Schools (Rebroadcast)
This is the unique story of three Notasulga, Ala. structures—a school, a church and a cemetery—that have brought together a community in the hope of having them listed on the National Register of Historical Places. The schoolhouse was one of the first Rosenwald schools built in the south. A "Rosenwald School" was the name informally applied to schools, shops and teachers' homes built primarily for the education of African Americans in the early 20th century. Rhonda Colvin reports.

April 18, 2008                      7:00 PM                      MIG-15 (Rebroadcast)
When a young North Korean pilot decides to touch down at a U.S. Air Force base just after the Korean War, he has no idea what the future had in store for him, or even if he would survive. The year was 1953, and Lt. No Kum-Sok was willing to give the Americans — his former enemies — the MiG-15 plane they so desperately wanted to study in exchange for his freedom. Some fifty-five years later, this program traces the events of that defection and where the MiG-15, No Kum-Sok and the Alabama air policeman who befriended him are today.

April 25, 2008                      7:00 PM                      Young Heroes of Alabama
This episode features the 2008 winners of APT's Young Heroes Awards. In a collaborative portrait of these five exceptional young people from throughout Alabama, Alabama Stories' anchors communicate the inspiring story of students who have demonstrated courage, determination, volunteerism, academic excellence and perseverance in the face of adversity, making a difference in the lives of those around them.

Sunday, April 27, 2008                      1:00 PM                      Young Heroes of Alabama

Friday, May 9, 2008                      7:00 PM                      License to Drive
The earning of a driver's license at the age of 16 is a rite of passage for almost all Alabamians. But for the parents of these new drivers, watching their children leave the house alone with a car can be frightening. Alabama has one of the leading teen-driver fatality rates in the country. Tim Lennox examines the subject of teen drivers, including two bills pre-filed for the state legislative session that would directly affect them.

Friday, May 16, 2008                      7:00 PM                      Alabama Goes Green
In 2008, Forbes magazine named Alabama one of the worst "green states" in the country. Alabama leaders, businessmen and homeowners are working to shake this stigma. Find out which businesses and communities in the state have set a goal of "going green," and the efforts they are making to do so. From fraternities to families, Alabama citizens are taking stock of their duty to preserve our resources. Lokia Richardson explains the origins of the green trend, as well as the controversies that surround the initiative.

Friday, May 23, 2008                      7:00 PM                      Alabama's Olympic Connection
Alabama and the international Olympics are as interlinked as the rings on the Olympic flag. Alabama is home to a multitude of Olympic medalists, and some of the greatest Olympic heroes our country has ever seen. In 1996, Alabama was honored to host some of the summer Olympic games. Legendary Legion Field, often called the "Football Capitol of the South" gave way to the European version of football—soccer. Rhonda Colvin explores ties to the Olympics—past, present and future.

Friday, May 30, 2008                      7:00 PM                      Cover To Cover
Once again, the Alabama Stories team joins together to honor the 2008 Young Writers & Illustrators of Alabama. The popular PBS KIDS series Reading Rainbow sponsored its 14th Annual Young Writers & Illustrators contest. The competition is open to children in grades K-3. State winners were selected in each of the grade levels, and the first-place winners will go on to compete on the national level. Alabama Stories was there to capture the excitement, from the gathering of the judging committee (which included author and poet Charles "Father Goose" Ghigna) to the final awards ceremony at the Alabama Book Festival in Montgomery's Old Alabama Town. Meet the generation who will write tomorrow's Alabama stories.

Friday, June 13, 2008                      7:00 PM                      Taking Off
Investment, jobs and money—Mobile and surrounding communities are on the verge of becoming the next "boomtown" in the Gulf South region. A massive steel mill, one of the largest current investments in the county, is currently under construction near southern Alabama's largest city. Mobile has also landed a key aircraft assembly plant. Chris Newbold examines the effects on the region from this influx of high-paying jobs and the "spin-off" factor.

Friday, June 20, 2008                      7:00 PM                      Destination: Alabama
Alabama is attracting nationwide attention from tourists! Attractions such as the Alabama Music Hall of Fame, the U.S. Space & Rocket Center and Alabama Adventure amusement park have visitors crossing the state border. Lakia Richardson takes us on a tour of some of Alabama's top vacation destinations.

Friday, June 27, 2008                      7:00 PM                      Pain at the Pump
With gas prices at record levels, motorists around the country (including Alabama) are feeling the pinch. On top of a lackluster vacation travel season, consumers can expect to see an increase in the price of goods, especially food items. And what about those who work with gas-operated equipment? From farmers to fishermen on the Alabama coast, higher fuel costs are making an impact. With the help of an economist or two, Randy Scott attempts to break down the actual price of gas. He also examines problems such as gas theft and a possible increase in fees for those who use credit cards to purchase fuel

Alabama Stories

Sunday, April 13, 2008      9:00 PM      Rosenwald Schools (Rebroadcast)

This is the unique story of three Notasulga, Ala. structures—a school, a church and a cemetery—that have brought together a community in the hope of having them listed on the National Register of Historical Places. The schoolhouse was one of the first Rosenwald schools built in the south. A "Rosenwald School" was the name informally applied to schools, shops and teachers' homes built primarily for the education of African Americans in the early 20th century. Rhonda Colvin reports.

Sunday, April 20, 2008      9:00 PM      MIG-15

When a young North Korean pilot decides to touch down at a U.S. Air Force base just after the Korean War, he has no idea what the future had in store for him, or even if he would survive. The year was 1953, and Lt. No Kum-Sok was willing to give the Americans — his former enemies — the MiG-15 plane they so desperately wanted to study in exchange for his freedom. Some fifty-five years later, this program traces the events of that defection and where the MiG-15, No Kum-Sok and the Alabama air policeman who befriended him are today.

Sunday, April 27, 2008      9:00 PM      Young Heroes

This episode features the 2008 winners of APT's Young Heroes Awards. In a collaborative portrait of these five exceptional young people from throughout Alabama, Alabama Stories' anchors communicate the inspiring story of students who have demonstrated courage, determination, volunteerism, academic excellence and perseverance in the face of adversity, making a difference in the lives of those around them.

Sunday, May 11, 2008      9:00 PM      License to Drive

The earning of a driver's license at the age of 16 is a rite of passage for almost all Alabamians. But for the parents of these new drivers, watching their children leave the house alone with a car can be frightening. Alabama has one of the leading teen-driver fatality rates in the country. Tim Lennox examines the subject of teen drivers, including two bills pre-filed for the state legislative session that would directly affect them.

Sunday, May 18, 2008      9:00 PM      Alabama Goes Green

In 2008, Forbes magazine named Alabama one of the worst "green states" in the country. Alabama leaders, businessmen and homeowners are working to shake this stigma. Find out which businesses and communities in the state have set a goal of "going green," and the efforts they are making to do so. From fraternities to families, Alabama citizens are taking stock of their duty to preserve our resources. Lakia Richardson explains the origins of the green trend, as well as the controversies that surround the initiative.

Sunday, May 25, 2008      9:00 PM      Alabama's Olympic Connection
Alabama and the international Olympics are as interlinked as the rings on the Olympic flag. Alabama is home to a multitude of Olympic medalists, and some of the greatest Olympic heroes our country has ever seen. In 1996, Alabama was honored to host some of the summer Olympic games. Legendary Legion Field, often called the "Football Capitol of the South" gave way to the European version of football—soccer. Rhonda Colvin explores ties to the Olympics—past, present and future.

Sunday, June 1, 2008      9:00 PM      Cover to Cover
Once again, the Alabama Stories team joins together to honor the 2008 Young Writers & Illustrators of Alabama. The popular PBS KIDS series Reading Rainbow sponsored its 14th Annual Young Writers & Illustrators contest. The competition is open to children in grades K-3. State winners were selected in each of the grade levels, and the first-place winners will go on to compete on the national level. Alabama Stories was there to capture the excitement, from the gathering of the judging committee (which included author and poet Charles "Father Goose" Ghigna) to the final awards ceremony at the Alabama Book Festival in Montgomery's Old Alabama Town. Meet the generation who will write tomorrow's Alabama stories.

Sunday, June 15, 2008      9:00 PM      Taking Off
Investment, jobs and money—Mobile and surrounding communities are on the verge of becoming the next "boomtown" in the Gulf South region. A massive steel mill, one of the largest current investments in the county, is currently under construction near southern Alabama's largest city. Mobile has also landed a key aircraft assembly plant. Chris Newbold examines the effects on the region from this influx of high-paying jobs and the "spin-off" factor.

Sunday, June 22, 2008      9:00 PM      Destination: Alabama
Alabama is attracting nationwide attention from tourists! Attractions such as the Alabama Music Hall of Fame, the U.S. Space & Rocket Center and Alabama Adventure amusement park have visitors crossing the state border. Lakia Richardson takes us on a tour of some of Alabama's top vacation destinations.

Sunday, June 29, 2008      9:00 PM      Pain at the Pump
With gas prices at record levels, motorists around the country (including Alabama) are feeling the pinch. On top of a lackluster vacation travel season, consumers can expect to see an increase in the price of goods, especially food items. And what about those who work with gas-operated equipment? From farmers to fishermen on the Alabama coast, higher fuel costs are making an impact. With the help of an economist or two, Randy Scott attempts to break down the actual price of gas. He also examines problems such as gas theft and a possible increase in fees for those who use credit cards to purchase fuel.

Capitol Journal
